GOVERNOR DEWEY.

Ex-Governor Nelson Dewey died at his home at Cassville, Grant county, at midnight on Saturday.

Governor Dewey had been a resident of Wisconsin for more than 52 years. He settled in Grant county in 1836, and after filling the position of a clerk for a short time, he formed a partnership with the late J. Allen Barber, at Lancaster. The published sketches of his life give the following facts: His first political office was that of register of deeds of Grant county, to which he was elected upon the organization of the county in 1837. He represented Grant county in the second legislative assembly of Wisconsin territory in 1838, and was speaker of the house in 1840 and 1841. In 1842 he became a member of the territorial council, and presided over its deliberations during the fourth session of thirty days. When the territory became a state Mr. Dewey became a candidate on the democratic ticket, and was elected first governor of the new state on May 8, 1848, and was sworn into office June 7, serving the four years from Jan. 1, 1850, to Jan. 5, 1854. During his term as the executive head of the state, Governor Dewey was recognized as an honest and conscientious official. He was severe in his denunciation of men and measures which he thought were wrong, as he was strong in his convictions of the right. Many of the methods of business now in vogue in the various departments of the state government were originated by him. The design for the first coat-of-arms, which was used until a few years ago, was selected by him. In the position of governor, at the trying period of the first years of the state's existence, his conduct of affairs was such as to reflect credit upon himself, and to be to the advantage of the state.

During the past few years the life of Governor Dewey had been a checkered one. In the days of his prosperity he built one of the finest residences in the state at Cassville, on the banks of the Mississippi. His terms and fences were made to match the mansion. But a few years ago a fire came and the magnificent home went to ashes. Then came reverse after reverse and trouble after trouble, until he lost all. His home was wrecked by family quarrels, a divorce suit was instituted by the governor, but it was dropped, but he and his wife, who was daughter of the late Judge Dunn, separated forever. She is now living at St. Louis with her son.

There are a great many people in Wisconsin who will deeply regret the misfortune that overtook Governor Dewey. His ability, character, and spirit, merited a better lot. The days that were the darkest to him, should have been his brightest.

GOVERNOR HOARD AND THE MILITIA.

Governor Hoard has sent a company of Eau Claire militia to West Superior to quell an incipient riot.

An ounce of prevention is always better than a pound of cure; but the city and county officials in West Superior seem to have been premature in their appeal to the governor for military aid. Unless serious violence is done (and it has not been done in West Superior) the grim threat of the presence of the militia armed to kill is not called for, and is not American.

It is instead of sending troops, our worthy governor had jumped upon a special train and gone himself, his presence would have been worth far more than the presence of the troops, he would have "made a record" for himself, and the good name of the state would have been less injured.—Evening Wisconsin.

This criticism will hardly be endorsed by public sentiment, especially in the light of experience gained in 1886. If Governor Rusk had acted on this suggestion of the Evening Wisconsin, [there is no telling how disastrous and wide spread would have been the riot in Milwaukee in May, 1886. We judge that his presence alone would not have answered the purpose. But his presence together with the presence of troops, put an end to the proposed riot.

The Evening Wisconsin has not forgotten a fact in history, that when the strike occurred in 1886 at East St. Louis, Governor Oglesby went to the scene of the trouble. He took no troops. He played the game of Governor Seymour, and talked to the strikers, and it had no more effect than the waving of a hand. The Evening Wisconsin will likewise remember that itself, as well as all other leading newspapers of the country, criticized Governor Oglesby for his want of judgment in not calling out the militia, and the press universally endorsed the action of Governor Rusk.

Public sentiment will certainly uphold Governor Hoard in sending a company of militia to Superior. The authorities called for them. There was no time for the governor to hesitate and make guesses as to the advisability of responding to the call for assistance. It would not have been wise for him to go to Superior alone, for the rioters would have cared little for the presence of a governor unsupported by troops. Simply because the troops were not called upon to shoot, or because the strikers ceased their violent demonstrations, is no reason why it was a mistake to send the troops to the scene of the trouble.

"An ounce of prevention is always better than a pound of cure," and therefore well done for Governor Hoard.

In speaking of the liberality of the American people in endowing colleges, an exchange says that the list of those endowed during the past several months include the following: Lake Forest, (Ill.) University, $500,000; Syracuse (N. Y.) University, $365,000; Yale college, $275,000; Cornell college, $265,000; Princeton college, $225,000; Vassar college, $222,000; Brown university, $187,000; Williams college, $152,000; Tufts (Mass.) university, $135,000; Western Reserve university, $113,000; and Boston university and Johns Hopkins, $100,000 each. This does not make mention of Beloit college which has received $200,000 during the present summer, nor of Knox college, at Galesburg, which received $50,000 from Dr. Pearson.

Everybody will feel glad that the boys in blue will turn out on mass to the encampment at Milwaukee. General Warner did a wise thing in advising the soldiers to go to Milwaukee whether they had to pay half fare or one cent. Milwaukee deserves the highest compliment the grand army men can bestow upon the city.

The secret of Jay Gould's success is very fitly described by Mr. Shornlamb: "Talk about Jay Gould's making money," said Mr. Shornlamb; "he never made a cent in his life. He waits till other people make it and then gets it 'way from them'."

BOULANGER HEARD FROM.

A Manifesto to the French Electors Denouncing the Ministry.

LONDON, July 22.—Gen. Boulanger, Count Dillon, and M. Rochefort have issued the following manifesto:

To the French Electors: We have declined to reply to the absurd calumnies concocted by ministers who have been convicted of perjury. Our abstention from this odious comedy is now justified by the indignant repulsions of attempts to extort from officers of the army lying denunciations of their former chief. These suborners of witnesses have not hesitated to employ the tax-payers' money to obtain false depositions from jailbirds in their very cells at Mazas. These are the miserable prevarications which accuse the former minister of war of corruption. Public disgust has already condemned and the justice of the country will speedily overtake these malefactors.

"The law appealed to the penal code, but the outcome of their infamous machinations was that they could bring absolutely nothing against us. If they could have obtained the most trivial proof they would not have risked the Assize court by negotiating with forgers.

"It is for you, dear fellow-countrymen, to judge between us and these thieves. We await with confidence your sentence from which these bandits, who feel it approach, vainly endeavor to escape. Long live regenerated France. Long live the honest republic."

EMPEROR WILLIAM has abandoned his proposed visit to the Lofoden island.

Paralyzed.

Many are the absurd transactions which take place in banks, says the Youth's Companion, some of them showing an over-cautiousness in the care of money, and others, like the following, indicating an amusing ignorance of its value.

A Georgia paper says that a negro, the fortunate possessor of a valuable household, one day sold his property for $10,000. He was given a check for that amount, which was carried in due time to one of the banks. The paying teller asked him how much of the money he wanted in cash.

"I want all dat ar paper calls for," replied the negro.

"What! You don't want $10,000 in cash?"

"Jesso, sah."

"All right," answered the man, and in five minutes he began piling the money on the counter.

As he laid the $500 packages on the counter the negro's eyes grew larger and larger. Finally, when twenty of the packages had been placed before him, he looked intently at the money and then, with a broad grin on his face, he said:

"I 'se jist paralyzed! Gimme a dollar 'n' a half, 'n' you kin keep de rest till I call again."

Gen. Grant's Matrimonial Devotion.

It is doubtful whether any chronicle or romance of the days of chivalry contains so touching an instance of devotion as that lately told of Gen. Grant, says the New York Graphic. When the honors came upon the Grants, like sorrows to the house of Denmark, "not single species in battalions," the mistress of the White House began to renew the dream of her girlhood—to have her cross-eyes straightened. Wishing to surprise the President, Mrs. Grant, telling nobody, sent for the most eminent oculist in America. He willingly promised to undertake the operation, which he assured her would be easy to accomplish and without danger. The good lady could not contain herself for joy, and womanlike (am I right, mesdames), gave way when she saw her husband and confided to him her secret, the pleasure she had in store for him. He looked wistfully into those dear eyes which had held him through all the trials of a checkered career and said in his simple way, "Galls, I wish you would not change them. I love them as they are, and they might seem strange if altered." Nor Launcelot, nor Romeo, nor lover of any clime or age ever spoke words of tender gallantry than those of the hero of Appomattox.

First a Pigmy—Then a Giant.

We are too apt to regard a small ailment much as we would some pigmy, unpleasant as aspect and pranksy in deed, but incapable of serious mischief. We ignore the fact that it grows prodigiously, strengthened in proportion, and begets evil progeny. A fit of indigestion, a slight bilious attack, sensation of heat and languor when the system should be braced by recent sleep, uneasiness, countenance nervous, inactivity of the kidneys or bladder—what are these but the precursors of obstinate and serious trouble? In either of the above emergencies common sense and experience unite in indicating Hostetter's Stomach Bitters as the best preventive. Particularly should its use be prompt down the back, yawning, chilliness, a malarial attack, manifest themselves. Incontinent rheumatism grows apace. Don't neglect it. So with constipation and debility.

A HUSBAND'S AWFUL DEED

HE KILLS HIS WIFE, HER FATHER, AND HIMSELF.

A Midnight Battle with Police, Resulting in Two Deaths—The Day's Criminal News.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., July 22.—For several years a feud existed between the families of Simpson and Howton, in the extreme Western portion of this county. It began by Tom Simpson killing one of the Howtons, for which he was in the criminal court here. A mistrial resulted and Simpson was released on bail, which he subsequently forfeited, and a reward of $200 was offered for his arrest.

The next tragedy was the death of another Howton by a shot from ambush as he was riding along the road. Recently the officers of the law have been trying to arrest Tom Simpson, who was known to be in the vicinity of Mud Creek. Yesterday Sheriff Glenn and Deputies Scroggins and W. H. Morgan went down to Mud Creek and secured the assistance of two of the Howtons, and last night surrounded Simpson in a gin-house where he was sleeping in company with another man and a negro.

At daylight Tom came out and looked around and was promptly ordered by Deputy Scroggins to throw up his hands and surrender. Instead of doing so he rushed around the house with a bullet from Scroggins' pistol whistling after him and was met by a bullet from J. B. Howton's gun and fell dead. Almost at the same instant two guns were fired from the house, killing Deputy Morgan and fatally wounding J. B. Howton.

The inmates of the gin house, whoever they are, have barricaded and defy arrest. J. T. Howton at once came to Birmingham for assistance, leaving Deputy Scroggins on guard, assisted by several of Howton's men. Smith at once sent seven deputies armed with Winchester to the scene of difficulty.

BULLETS FLEW THICK.

Fatal Fight Between Officers and Supposed Jail-Breakers at Cleveland.

CLEVELAND, O., July 22.—Two prisoners, W. A. Smith and Richard N. Mansfield, broke from the county jail last night. Deputy Sheriff Joseph Goldsoll went to the western part of the city, where one of the men lived, and with a policeman lay in wait for the fellows. About midnight a crowd containing the two men passed along the street. The officers called to the occupants of the vehicle to stop, and after some talk one of the men fired a revolver at the policeman. He and Goldsoll were rushed along the street, and the crowd exchanged a half-dozen shots being exchanged.

Goldsoll fell at the first volley, shot through the abdomen, and the rig was rapidly driven away. The wounded officer was taken to a hospital, where he now lies in a dying condition, and an hour later the rig driven by the two men was found a mile from the place of the shooting. In the buggy was the dead body of one of the men. He had been shot through the body. It was at first thought the dead man was Smith, the younger of the prisoners, but those who knew Smith utterly failed to identify the corpse, and the police are still in the dark. They think, however, that the dead man was up to mischief, for in a buggy were found two revolvers, a club, screw driver, and a piece of rope. The horse, which had been stolen in the eastern part of the city, was wounded in the hip and the buggy was riddled with bullets. It is believed the other man was wounded.

Three Negroes to Be Lynched.

VICKSBURG, Miss., July 22.—A dispatch received here from Clinton, La., states that three of the five negroes who murdered Fratorator a few months ago were captured at Litch River Junction, brought to Clinton to-day, and will be lynched to-night at the scene of the murder. Pursuit of the "lts murderers at Pantherburn still continues, but persons arriving from the vicinity to-day say that no captures have been made.

Stole $12,000 Worth of Jewelry.

LYNN, Mass., July 22.—Last night professional burglars robbed the jewelry store of H. J. Bodwell, 83 Monroe street. The dial knob of the large safe was knocked off with a heavy sledge hammer. The entire contents were packed out, and the bolts yielded to the turn of the handle. The burglars got away with $12,000 worth of jewelry, and left behind only a few tools.

Says He Is "Jack, the Ripper."

LONDON, July 22.—The name of the man who was arrested Friday on suspicion of being the Whitechapel murderer, and who subsequently confessed that he was guilty, is William Brodie. He was arraigned before a police magistrate Saturday morning. He said to the magistrate that the confession made by him to the police was true. The prisoner was remanded for a week.

AFTER THE RAILROAD.

Gov. Lowry Bound to Punish the Officers of the New Orleans and Northeastern.

JACKSON, Miss., July 22.—Gov. Lowry, Attorney-General Miller, and District Attorney Neville were in conference Saturday concerning the prosecution of the persons connected with the Sunday-Kidnapping. It is believed the conference was in reference to instituting proceedings against the New Orleans and Northeastern railroad for the forfeiture of its charter, and that the papers will be filed in the Second judicial district within the next two days. It is stated that the Governor regards the railroad authorities more culpable than any other.

They made it possible to have the fight and violate the laws, and that, too, when they had more property in the State than all the sports, spectators, citizens of Marion county together, and such property in the very nature of things had to be protected by the most conservative laws of the State. The Governor has never been shaken in his determination to pursue the railroad, and thinks that Sullivan, Kilrain, and others sink into insignificance when compared to their defiant corporation.

A NATURAL GAS TRUST.

A Movement to Consolidate Ohio and Indiana Companies.

LIMA, Ohio, July 22.—There is a movement on foot looking to the consolidation of all the natural-gas companies in Ohio and Indiana fields and putting them into a trust. Dr. S. A. Baxter of this city is quietly engineering the matter with the aid of J. B. Townsend, H. M. Evans, and J. C. Smith. It is understood that this arrangement has the sanction of Calvin S. Brice, Oliver H. Payne, and other Standard Oil magnates. They now own the majority of the stock of the companies in Ohio and Indiana and will buy up the stock of the remaining independent companies. It is a gigantic scheme, which will probably mature fully in a few weeks.

Dr. B. MINOR, the eminent oculist of Detroit, Mich., will visit every town in this county during the summer. Anyone suffering with weak eyes, or eyes affected by various diseases, should not fail to see him. Orders left at the post-office will be promptly attended to. No extra charge for examining or visiting patients at their homes.

EX-GOV. DEWEY DEAD.

Wisconsin's First Executive Passes Away at Cassville.

CASSVILLE, Wis., July 22.—Nelson Dewey, the first Governor of Wisconsin, died at Cassville Sunday morning at a few minutes to 1 o'clock. He was aged 75 years and 6 months. He had been failing for a long time and his death was no surprise to his friends. In fact it has been anticipated so long that preparations were being made for his funeral before he died. The Governor and all the State officers will attend as well as all the ex-Governors of the State and many leading men.

Nelson C. Dewey came to the Territory from New York in 1836, when it was known as "the lead region." Pushing, energetic, and industrious, young Dewey, then barely 21, threw himself into the feverish life of the mining region. He had a good legal education and formed a partnership with J. Allen Barber of Lancaster. Every lead struck in those days involved more or less fighting, legal and otherwise. Dewey and Barber were in the swim and wealth came to them. Mr. Dewey went into politics, was elected the first Governor of the State when it came into the Union, was re-elected, and then slowly faded from public view. In 1854 he began the task of making a city on the banks of the Mississippi.

In the enterprise he sunk all his fortune. Just outside of the village he erected a country home that eclipsed in splendor the homes of Eastern millionaires along the Hudson. The outbuildings were in keeping with the residence. A line of hewn stone fence shut in the land immediately around the house, while hundreds of acres stretched away over the bluffs into the wilderness almost unmarked.

One night the residence caught fire from an unknown cause and burned to the ground. The ruins remain. From this point financial difficulties began to accumulate, ending in Gov. Dewey turning the great domain over to the Northwestern Mutual insurance company, which had a mortgage on the place. Since that time he lived at Cassville trying to secure what he could from the wreck.

DR. F. B. BREWER: I received your last box of medicine all right. I think I am much better than I was a week ago. I commenced to gain strength as soon as I got the pills and fevers broken up. I don't have those nervous spells any more. I don't cough and raise as much as I did; what I do raise looks pretty bad but no blood, just clear corruption. I have not vomited up my food for about a week. My instincts begin to taste natural. I have a splendid appetite.

HOT WEATHER SUBJECTS.

Churches in Janesville Well Attended Yesterday.

MANY TAKING VACATIONS.

Yet Interest in Church Matters Not Materially Affected—The Union Service.

Sunday dawned bright and cheery on Janesville yesterday, and although many of our citizens are enjoying camp life at the lakes, or are on pleasure trips through various parts of the union, yet the usual good attendance and active interest taken in Sunday church services does not seem to abate. In fact, those left at home put forth extra effort to keep up our former good reputation in this respect.

The attendance at the different Sunday schools is also full, and even after making due account for approaching Sunday school picnic, and taking into consideration the intense hot weather, the regular attendance ought to be congratulated on the interest shown in the welfare of the schools and on the influence exerted to secure new members who shall become constant attendants and valuable helpers in Sunday school work.

At the Presbyterian church yesterday morning the pastor, Rev. W. F. Brown, took for his subject, Psalm 135: "My times are in thy hand."

A great many people are prejudiced against doctrinal sermons. The pastor said he would preach a doctrinal sermon. Things are not half-hazard in this world. Every occurrence in the daily life of each one is providential. If anybody ever recognized his own powers and has a capacity to look out for himself and his followers, David did. A part of David's success was due to his unusual skill, and yet he said it was God who delivered him. Some people say we are the slaves of circumstances. Napoleon said he would make circumstances. Between these two extremes there is a common sense view. Everybody appreciates the fact of human freedom, but we should "run with patience the race set before us." A man is never to go great danger as when he thinks he is doing better than others. All good times are ultimately from God. All things work together for good. Do your part well; you may be sure that God will do His part.

At the Court Street M. E. church the pastor Rev. G. H. Trevor took for his text (Psalm 135: "For those who will light My Candle."

The bible passages in an eminent degree the art of putting things. It is full of metaphors. To get at all the truths suggested by these we must attend to the surface analogies.

One reason why so many men live like brutes, is because they have never believed themselves to be any more. No man that believes himself to be a nobody, ever achieved greatness or blessed humanity. Egotism is bad and annoying, self righteousness is worse, but it is power to clip the wings of the soul and pass its energies self depreciation is worst. Ever and anon the credo clamors for acceptance. "Man can and must light his own candle if it is ever to be lighted." Self-culture, exercise of will, &c., are offered as the enlightening torch. But all that has ever been accomplished by these processes has been the manufacture of gilded chandeliers, artistic lamps, and colored candles, but without the fire. When hoisting succeeds the need of sunshine and rain; when handsome candleabra can take the place of the light, and the polished wire of the electric lamp flash glory without the electric spark, then we may perhaps dispense with the services of the Lord Jesus and the Holy Spirit in attaining true character. God can light my candle, yet God must light it unless it remains forever lustreless and dead. And he may be expected to. Our part is to put ourselves in proper posture before him, and when he comes near with the enlightening ray, not to bid him depart.

In the evening at the union services the beautiful auditorium of the Baptist church was filled to its utmost capacity. The music rendered by the choir was excellent and very appropriate to the occasion. The sermon by the pastor, Rev. Dr. M. G. Hodge was an able one and attractively listened to by the large audience. He took for his text:

Job. 40:8. Wilt thou condemn me that thou mayest be righteous?

No fault can be found with Job for vindicating himself when unjustly accused by the three who so largely discussed his calamities. But in his defenses he had in some instances uttered words which reflected on divine administration. The true reason why he had fallen so heavily upon him was not well brought out in his argument, and it seems that it was not well apprehended by him. So God himself speaks out of the whirlwind to show
